Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371© of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

Claims 5-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102 (e) as being anticipated by Marchesseault

(US Pat. No. 6,343,308)("Marchesseault").

As per claim 5, Marchesseault teaches a distributed computer system, as claimed comprises a memory containing a first virtual machine (thus, a first Java version of a Java Virtual Machine running on a client, which is equivalent to a memory containing a first virtual machine) (see col. 2, lines 25-26);

a memory containing a second virtual machine executing a process that receives (thus, wherein the applet includes at least one call to an object class associated with a second Java version of the Java Virtual Machine; which is readable as a second virtual machine executing a process that receives) (see col. 12, lines 1-3), from the first machine, a registration of interest in an event and transmits a message in response to the occurrence of the event, the registration of interest and the message including computer code (thus, a computer usable medium having first computer readable program code means embodied in said medium for downloading the applet to the client wherein the applet includes each object class called within the applet, the computer usable medium having second computer readable program code means embodied in said medium for downloading to the client a class interface having at least one respective identifier for the object class associated with the second Java version of the Java Virtual Machine called by the applet; which is readable as a registration of interest in an event and transmits a message in response to the occurrence of the event, the registration of interest and the message including computer code) (see col. 14, lines 32);

a memory containing a third virtual machine for receiving the message and executing the computer code (thus, the Java version 1.1 or higher classes are not loaded and verified when the version 1.0 classes and class interfaces are loaded once the Java version 1.0 classes and class interfaces are loaded, the applet executes and determines whether or not to load the version 1.1

classes, if the applet determines that it is running within a version 1.1 JVM it will load and validate the Java version 1.1 classes; which is readable as a memory containing a third virtual machine for receiving the message and executing the computer code)(see col. 6, lines 21-27);

processors for running the first virtual machine, the second virtual machine, and the third virtual machine (thus, executing an applet within a first Java version of a JVM running on a client wherein the applet includes at least one call to a second Java version object class are provided a request to activate an applet is made to a server hosting the applet from a client, the Java applet, containing calls to various object classes, is then downloaded to the client a class interface having a respective identifier for each respective second Java version object class called by the applet is also downloaded to the client; which is readable as processors for running the first virtual machine, the second virtual machine, and the third virtual machine) (see col. 2, lines 24-30).

As per claim 6, Marchesseault teaches a distributed computer system, as claimed wherein the message transmitted by the second virtual machine is a generic notify method (thus, executing an applet within a first Java version of a JVM running on a client, wherein the applet includes at least one call to a second Java version object class are provided; which is readable as the message transmitted by the second virtual machine is a generic notify method)(see col. 2, lines 24-33).

As per claim 7, the limitations of claim 7 are rejected in the analysis of claim 5, and this claim is rejected on that basis.

As per claim 8, Marchesseault teaches a distributed computer system as claimed, wherein each said virtual machine is on a separate computer (thus, a method of executing an applet within a first Java version of a Java Virtual Machine running on a client, which is equivalent to virtual machine is on a separate computer)(see col. 11, lines 66-67).

As per claim 9, Marchesseault teaches a distributed computer system as claimed, wherein the computer is implemented in an object (thus, wherein the application includes at least one call to an object class of a second version of the runtime system, which is equivalent to computer is implemented in an object)(see col. 2, lines 4-6).
